AT LEAST 31 TRAPPED

Fear Expressed None Of Men
In Kentucky Mine
Are Still Alive

PINEVILLE, Ky., Dec. 27—Fresh crews of federally-trained rescue workers tumbled back into the slope of the Kentucky Straight Creek Coal Company's No. 1 mine today after efforts to reach 31 or more trapped miners had been halted for hours by smoke in the main shaft.

Rescue crews sent word back to the surface that they were fighting fire after fire in the explosion blasted shaft. Smoke, fumes, and carbon monoxide gas filled the air where the men were working and even the most hopeful admitted that "things look mighty bad."

As daylight broke over the white-frosted mountain under which the shaft tunnels, hollow-eyed relatives and loved ones stumbled from the area around the tipple to go home for hasty meals.

The weary rescue crews had reached a point within a half mile of where the men were believed to be trapped two miles from the mouth of the sloping, mountain-side shaft. A flareback of smoke drove them coughing from the mine and sent a tremor of fear through the women and children clustered about the entrance.

A mine official who went back into the mine with the crews said "we have been driven back at least 1,000 feet. I don't know how long it will take us to clear the pocket. There's no telling now when we will reach the men."

The blast which sealed off the men two miles inside the wood covered mountain, destroyed the electrical system that kept the ventilators going.

"The main delay right now is getting the ventilation going," said Frank Rhodes, neighboring mine superintendent and one of the rescue workers.

Rhodes said the temporary ventilation system set up to feed the rescue crews fresh air "leaks a lot."

The rescue workers on the job since yesterday morning, struggled through splintered timbers and fallen shale. Pools of chilled water wet them to the knees. The upper parts of their clothes were muddy from dust and sweat. The hot, smoke-filled air, reddened their skin.

"It's hot and smoky and it stinks," Rhodes said. "I know what hell is like."

The rescue teams were relieving each other at shorter intervals, pushing their equipment into the mine along the narrow gauge track that followed the slight grade to its bottom. The track was little damaged.

The rescue leaders did not know whether the smoke was from a

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27—The Pineville, Ky., coal mine disaster would rank among the country's worst if fears are borne out that none of the 31 to 50 miners in the shaft is alive.

The costliest coal mine disaster on record in the United States occurred before the adoption of modern mining safety practices. It took place Dec. 6, 1907, when 361 miners were killed at Monongah, W. Va.

The most recent major coal mine disaster was July 6, 1944, when 66 men were killed by an explosion and fire in the Powhattan mine, Bellaire, Ohio.

Perhaps the one remembered most vividly at Pineville was the disaster at Yancey, Ky., Dec. 9,

President Visits Newspaper
Staff, Goes To Office
In Independence

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Dec. 27—President Truman today began the second and last full day of his Christmas holiday at home by a visit with the staff of his home town newspaper, the Independence Examiner, and then went directly to his office in the federal building in Kansas City.

The President emerged late from the "little white house" in Independence, appearing first at 8:50 a. m. (CST). Ten minutes later he emerged, carrying a briefcase, and informed secret service men he wanted to visit the Examiner's office as the first order of business.

Mr. Truman greeted each member of the staff, visited a few minutes with Col. William Southern, Jr., 81, founder of the paper back in 1898 and still its publisher, and then thanked Frank Rucker, business manager, for an editorial which Rucker had written concerning the President's devotion to his aged mother.

He invited the elderly publisher, a lifelong friend who nevertheless opposed the Roosevelt-Truman ticket in last November's election, to attend a luncheon he was having today with newspaper correspondents.

TWO COUNTY FOX DRIVES PLANNED THIS WEEKEND

Two drives against pesky foxes have been planned in Pickaway county this week.

Raids of foxes against poultry, livestock and wild game have caused great losses in the county and organized drives against them are becoming more popular all the time.

Jackson township FFA is sponsoring a drive Friday. All wishing to participate are asked to meet at the Jackson township school at 12:30 p. m. Friday.

Pickaway county hunters are invited to attend a community fox drive to be held in Walnut township Saturday. Fox hunters will meet at the Hedges Chapel church at 12:30 p. m.

Hunters should bring their shotguns. No hunting license is required, Glenn Hay announced. Proceeds from the sale of the hides will go to the Red Cross.

Walkout of Electrical Workers Threatened; GM Dispute Goes To Capital

A walkout of 200,000 CIO electrical workers threatened today, as attention in the nationwide General Motors wage dispute shifted to Washington for settlement.

Officials of the United Electrical Workers announced that the general executive board would authorize a strike early next month in 76 plants of the General Electric company, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, and in General Motors' electrical appliance division.

UE members are waging a campaign for a $2-a-day pay boost, roughly the equivalent of the CIO United Auto Workers 30 per cent demand.

Negotiations between General Motors and representatives of some 175,000 striking auto workers were at a standstill until tomorrow's scheduled meeting with President Truman's fact-finding committee.

UAW leaders announced that they would appear before the board, but the company deferred comment until late today.

Meanwhile, labor disputes kept a total 498,000 workers away from BERLIN, Dec. 27—In the eight months since the fall of the Reich, the Red army has converted north-eastern Germany from a broken war machine into a going peace-time concern.

The Russians are working in close liaison with a hand-picked corps of carefully tutored German civilians many of them Communists.

What they have accomplished was disclosed during a closely supervised eight-day tour covering 750 miles in two of the six states and provinces occupied by the Red army.

Touring the province of Saxony and the adjoining state of Saxony in party of five newspapermen, this writer gathered the general impression that the Russians have tackled their occupation problems with realistic efficiency.

ASSAULT WITH INTENT TO KILL CHARGE FILED

A charge of assault with intent to kill has been filed against Orrin Dorsey Diltz, 24, auto mechanic of Circleville. Preliminary hearing for Diltz will be held in Justice of Peace Harold O. Eveland's court Friday at 9 a. m. The affidavit charging the offense was signed by Clark Neff, Jr., Millport, who alleges Diltz pointed a gun at him.

William Harold "Dick" Pettibone, 21, Millport, whom witnesses say was injured when a gun went off while Neff and Diltz were fighting on the Cromley road near Ashville Christmas morning, is reported in a "fair" condition at St. Anthony hospital, Columbus.

Hospital officials reported that Pettibone "will probably recover if no complications develop Thursday."

Details of the early Christmas morning fracas are being obtained by the sheriff's department and the prosecuting attorney. Witnesses have said that the affair began when Mr. and Mrs. William Osborn, Ashville, slid off the icy road into a ditch early Christmas morning.

SURPRISE VISIT PLAN PROPOSED

Some Evidences Of Abuse Of Veterans Found In
U. S. Hospitals

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27—Rep. Marion T. Bennett, R. Mo., proposed today that the house veterans committee be given the permanent right to stage periodic surprise "check-up" visits to veterans hospitals.

Bennett said he had found evidence of past beatings and mistreatment of veteran patients but that most of these abuses had been corrected. He said the possibility of surprise visits by a congressional committee would do much to prevent their recurrence.

"That would keep hospital administrators on their toes," he said. "They'd have to keep everything in good order if they knew that veterans committee members could drop in at any time to see if anything's wrong."

Bennett is a member of a five-man veterans subcommittee which is now preparing a report on a year-long investigation of veterans hospitals. The house authorized the inquiry after several newspapers and magazines charged that veterans were being given "third rate" medical care.

Bennett said that he intends to ask that his permanent "check up" idea be included in the official report to the house.

"No one can deny that the mere fact that the committee was investigating the hospitals forced administrators to improve conditions in them," he said. "For this reason at least, the committee should be allowed to retain its powers of investigation indefinitely."

Under the present rules of the house, the veterans committee would lose this power at the end of the year.

Bennett said the subcommittee

CULTURES TO BE TAKEN AGAIN ON FRIDAY MORNING

Another chance for Circleville school pupils to submit to examinations for diphtheria will be given Friday morning.

School officials have announced that the 150 students who have not yet had throat cultures taken are to report at 9 a. m. Friday to Room 103 at the high school.

Pupils who are not checked will not be readmitted to classes when schools reopen January 2, it was announced.

Cultures have been taken from most students, teachers and other school employees in an effort to locate all possible cases of diphtheria and "carriers" of the disease in an effort to prevent an epidemic. Health authorities advised the city-wide checks as the only sure means of protecting the health of all children.

BYRNES ANNOUNCES U. S., BRITISH, REDS AGREE ON PROGRAM

'No Other Phase of Atomic Problem Discussed'
Secretary Says At End of Long Big 3
Meeting; Communique Due Tonight

MOSCOW, Dec. 27—Secretary of State James F. Byrnes revealed today that the foreign ministers of the United States, Great Britain and Russia had agreed to set up a commission on atomic energy.

The news that the big three had reached an agreement on atomic energy was given by Byrnes at a press conference which wound up the 12-day meeting of the foreign ministers here.

A long and detailed communique on the three-power conference will be released at 6 a. m. Friday (10 p. m. Thursday EST) in Moscow, Washington and London.

Byrnes, unkempt and weary after a sleepless night and 24 hours of virtually uninterrupted work, dropped a verbal atomic bomb of his own at a press conference he held before departing by plane for Washington by way of Berlin and Paris.

"When you read about atomic energy in the communique providing for the establishment of a commission, you will see that no other phase of the subject was discussed," he said.

Thus came the first official word that Russia, the United States and Britain had come to a meeting of the minds on the atomic problem, one of the gravest confronting the troubled post-war world and apparently the biggest single bone of contention among the big three.

While Byrnes disclosed the establishment—proposed for actual—of a commission on atomic energy, he veered away from the subject without a clue as to its nature or scope.

(The London Evening Standard reported that the foreign ministers had agreed to turn over to the 11-nation UNO security council, plus Canada, the problem of studying and making recommendations for exchanging basic scientific information for controlling atomic energy and eliminating atomic weapons.)

Byrnes said that in addition to the atomic commission matter, "many problems" were settled at the conference of himself, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Britain and Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov of the Soviet Union.

He termed it a "very constructive conference" at which cordial relations were established among the big three, "giving hope of settlement of other problems in the same spirit."

The conference ended at 4 a. m. after a 13½ hour session between Byrnes, Molotov and Bevin. The three men closed their 12-day meeting with a formal signing ceremony.

Byrnes said that no secret agreements had been reached.

Meeting correspondents at 7:30 a. m., shortly before taking off for Washington by air, Byrnes said:

"There is no agreement on any subject which is not covered by the communique. I say this because some people are always anxious about secret agreements. When you read the communique item regarding atomic energy you will see there was not any other phase discussed."

"It has been a very constructive conference," Byrnes said, "not only because of the settlement of many problems, but because cordial relations have been established between representatives of the three countries giving hope of settlement of other problems in the same spirit."

(His reference to the atomic energy statement appeared to mean that only part of the question was discussed—probably plans for control, rather than detailed scientific information about how the bomb was made.)

"Outside of matters covered in the communique, the foreign ministers discussed a number of other matters, and by an exchange of views clarified subjects for the three governments so it will be easier for them to secure action in the future," Byrnes said.

Byrnes was extremely tired from the long final meeting, held in the Spiridonovka palace. It ran from 2:30 to 9 p. m., then resumed at 11 p. m. after a two-hour dinner recess and continued until 4 a. m.

All essential business was settled by midnight. After that it was a question of arranging tech-

"When you read about atomic energy in the communique providing for the establishment of a commission, you will see that no other phase of the subject was discussed," he said.

Thus came the first official word that Russia, the United States and Britain had come to a meeting of the minds on the atomic problem, one of the gravest confronting the troubled post-war world and apparently the biggest single bone of contention among the big three.

While Byrnes disclosed the establishment—proposed for actual—of a commission on atomic energy, he veered away from the subject without a clue as to its nature or scope.

The London Evening Standard reported that the foreign ministers had agreed to turn over to the 11-nation UNO security council, plus Canada, the problem of studying and making recommendations for exchanging basic scientific information for controlling atomic energy and eliminating atomic weapons.

Byrnes said that in addition to the atomic commission matter, "many problems" were settled at the conference of himself, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Britain and Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov of the Soviet Union.

He termed it a "very constructive conference" at which cordial relations were established among the big three, "giving hope of settlement of other problems in the same spirit."

The conference ended at 4 a. m. after a 13½ hour session between Byrnes, Molotov and Bevin. The three men closed their 12-day meeting with a formal signing ceremony.

Byrnes said that no secret agreements had been reached. Meeting correspondents at 7:30 a. m., shortly before taking off for Washington by air, Byrnes said:

"There is no agreement on any subject which is not covered by the communique. I say this because some people are always anxious about secret agreements. When you read the communique item regarding atomic energy you will see there was not any other phase discussed."

"It has been a very constructive conference," Byrnes said, "not only because of the settlement of many problems, but because cordial relations have been established between representatives of the three countries giving hope of settlement of other problems in the same spirit."

(His reference to the atomic energy statement appeared to mean that only part of the question was discussed—probably plans for control, rather than detailed scientific information about how the bomb was made.)

"Outside of matters covered in the communique, the foreign ministers discussed a number of other matters, and by an exchange of views clarified subjects for the three governments so it will be easier for them to secure action in the future," Byrnes said.

Byrnes was extremely tired from the long final meeting, held in the Spiridonovka palace. It ran from 2:30 to 9 p. m., then resumed at 11 p. m. after a two-hour dinner recess and continued until 4 a. m.

All essential business was settled by midnight. After that it was a question of arranging technical details.

JAP COUNCIL PLAN APPROVED

Foreign Ministers Agree To Set Up Council Like
That In Germany

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—The Moscow foreign ministers conference agreed to create a four-power control council for Japan patterned in general after the present control council for Germany, it was learned today.

The United States, the British empire, Russia and China would share authority equally in the control council. Each would have a veto power.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur would remain as supreme allied commander for Japan to carry out the directives of the council, it was learned. Indications were, however, that MacArthur might not be completely subservient to the control council but would retain some authority to act independently.

The allied supreme commander's role was by no means entirely clear on the basis of preliminary information. Full delineation of his powers awaited tonight's formal announcement of the foreign ministers' agreement.

Russia has agreed to sit both on the four-power control council and on the far eastern commission, which has been sitting in Washington. The commission now is expected to meet in Moscow.

to be less inflation than in the must work to eat. There appears western zone.

Most of the non-war factories are running again. The war plants either are under guard or are being removed as reparations.
German provincial officials scoff at rumors that the Russian zone has been stripped of industry. They asserted that 2,600 or 83 per cent of all non-war plants in Saxony province are producing consumer goods.

Active Nazis have been purged and nominal party members are being replaced slowly. The Russian attitude, however, seems more lenient than the American attitude in the cases of those who were not active Nazis.

Russian officials said they were not permitting metal mines to operate but all coal mines are operating and some are nearing pre-war production.

German officials said there was not enough food to maintain the health of the population over a long period.

There are six categories of ration cards in the Russian zone, permitting a daily average of a little more than 1,600 calories. All food is under strict Russian control, with fixed prices, except for 30 per cent of agricultural products which farmers are permitted to sell on the free market.

The Russians estimate that the average German worker earning 170 marks or more a month can supplement his 1,600 calorie ration with eight pounds of meat and four pounds of butter monthly by buying in the unrationed "free market."

The average German is not suffering. He even receives a coal ration to heat his home but like Germans everywhere in the occupied Reich he is whining and complaining.

As in the rest of Germany, there is an acute housing shortage aggravated by a great influx of refugees who have boosted the population in some places as much as 35 per cent in the last four months. Eighty-five per cent of all schools are operating and the Russians say there is complete religious freedom.

The Russian and American occupation policies differ radically. The Americans believe the Germans should work out their problems and issue orders telling German officials only what not to do.

The Russians have put hand-picked officials in many key positions and Russian military governors have issued detailed orders to German officials for what must be done.

SQUADS WITHIN HALF MILE OF TRAPPED MINERS

Rescue Efforts May Be Held Up Long Time By Lack Of Air Underground

pocket pierced in the debris, or whether another fire was raging in the depths of the mine.

"God only knows how long it will take to cover that last half mile," said Fred Slusher, company bookkeeper. Slusher said it was doubtful if any of the men were still alive.

The trapped miners' wives and children kept up their vigil in front of the gaping, smoke-blackened mouth of the shaft, tied to the bleak mountainside by a thin thread of hope.

Wrapped in tattered blankets, quilts and old coats, they stared at the hole at the base of the mountain where their husbands and fathers entered the shaft shortly before 7 a. m. yesterday. The explosion occurred only one hour and 33 minutes after the first shift reported for work after a Christmas holiday.

Faces were smudged with tears and smoke. Most of them had not eaten since breakfast yesterday. The mothers sometimes accepted a cup of coffee, or held the steaming tin cups to the lips of their children. Neighbors had kept the pots boiling over dull-red fires through the night for the rescue workers toiling in the mine.

A company official said the 20-man rescue squads, working in relays were "within 3,000 feet of where the men are believed to have been working when the explosion came."

The trapped workers were believed to have been two miles back in the shaft, which slopes gradually downward under the mountain for two and a half miles from the entrance.

Most of the workers lived in the drab mining community of blackened shacks called Four Mile, because it is four miles from Pineville. The mine is 15 miles from Cumberland Gap, Tenn., in the rolling hills of the southeast corner of Kentucky.

Mine officials were not certain yet how many men were in the rear workings when the explosion occurred. They had checked out lamps to 31, but some may have taken their lamps home over the holiday, and entered the mine without checking through the lamphouse.

"There were some transients working here," one spokesman said, "and if they are inside we have no way of checking since their families would not be aware they are missing."

W. E. Lewis, operator of the company, said 50 men might have been in the mine.

About 150 workers are normally employed at the mine.

Rescue workers said they had encountered 11 small fires inside the mine, but had extinguished all of them and did not believe there were any more burning between them and the trapped men.

Smoke in the mine shaft was heavy. The smoke clung to the valley, adding to the gloom. The air was heavy from the dampness left by a cold rain that fell most of yesterday.

The temperature was near freezing. The rescue workers were forced to wear gas-masks in the mine. A pocket of carbon monoxide gas was reported just inside the portal, but no black damp had been encountered.

State Mine Inspector Andrew Fish said he "would rather not say" what the chances were of the men's survival.

UAW Vice President Walter P. Reuther told newsmen that the critical wage question was not touched upon in yesterday's talks between the union and officials of GM. He said the meeting was limited to a discussion of secondary issues.

Although progress was stalled in the UAW-GM dispute, some developments were recorded elsewhere in the automobile industry.

The Kaiser-Frazer Corp. resumed contract talks with the UAW, following a company announcement that it would offer a "new" company security plan to the unions. The industry newcomer hopes to start production Feb. 1 on medium-priced Frazer and low-priced Kaiser autos.

pected to assume a secondary role in Japanese affairs.

The major accomplishments of the Moscow conference may be summarized in three points:

1. Atomic bomb control. An atomic energy commission is to be established within the United Nations organization. This commission will endeavor to bring about arrangements so that atomic energy will be used only for peaceful ends. It would seek to eliminate atomic weapons from all military use by severe control of its secret and its production.

2. Japan. A four-power control over Japan composed of four members representing the United States, Soviet Russia, China and the combined British empire. The council will have the power of control of enforcement of the directives and recommendations of the far eastern commission, sitting in Washington. Russia would join that far eastern advisory commission, on which she has until now declined membership. MacArthur would remain as the enforcement authority and supreme commander under the control of the four-power council. Russia and Britain would share in the military occupation of Japan with "token strength." The big four would retain veto rights over recommendations by the far eastern commission.

3. Korea. The United States, Britain, Russia and China will assume a joint four-power trusteeship over Korea for five years. After that Korea is expected to achieve the full independence promised two years ago in the Cairo communique. In the meantime the U. S. and Russian military commanders in the two occupation zones of Korea are to confer in an effort to eliminate difficulties of administration and communications.

SQUADS WITHIN HALF MILE OF TRAPPED MINERS

pocket pierced in the debris, or whether another fire was raging in the depths of the mine.

"God only knows how long it will take to cover that last half mile," said Fred Slusher, company bookkeeper. Slusher said it was doubtful if any of the men were still alive.

The trapped miners' wives and children kept up their vigil in front of the gaping, smoke-blackened mouth of the shaft, tied to the bleak mountainside by a thin thread of hope.

Wrapped in tattered blankets, quilts and old coats, they stared at the hole at the base of the mountain where their husbands and fathers entered the shaft shortly before 7 a. m. yesterday. The explosion occurred only one hour and 33 minutes after the first shift reported for work after a Christmas holiday.

Faces were smudged with tears and smoke. Most of them had not eaten since breakfast yesterday. The mothers sometimes accepted a cup of coffee, or held the steaming tin cups to the lips of their children. Neighbors had kept the pots boiling over dull-red fires through the night for the rescue workers toiling in the mine.

A company official said the 20-man rescue squads, working in relays were "within 3,000 feet of where the men are believed to have been working when the explosion came."

The trapped workers were believed to have been two miles back in the shaft, which slopes gradually downward toward the mountain for two and a half miles from the entrance.

Most of the workers lived in the drab mining community of blackened shacks called Four Mile, because it is four miles from Pineville. The mine is 15 miles from Cumberland Gap, Tenn., in the rolling hills of the southeast corner of Kentucky.

Mine officials were not certain yet how many men were in the rear workings when the explosion occurred. They had checked out lamps to 31, but some may have taken their lamps home over the holiday, and entered the mine without checking through the lamphouse.

"There were some transients working here," one spokesman said, "and if they are inside we have no way of checking since their families would not be aware they are missing."

W. E. Lewis, operator of the company, said 50 men might have been in the mine.

About 150 workers are normally employed at the mine.

Rescue workers said they had encountered 11 small fires inside the mine, but had extinguished all of them and did not believe there were any more burning between them and the trapped men.

Smoke in the mine shaft was heavy. The smoke clung to the valley, adding to the gloom. The air was heavy from the dampness left by a cold rain that fell most of yesterday.

The temperature was near freezing.

The rescue workers were forced to wear gas-masks in the mine. A pocket of carbon monoxide gas was reported just inside the portal, but no black damp had been encountered.

State Mine Inspector Andrew Fish said he "would rather not say" what the chances were of the men's survival.

would probably submit its report soon after the congress reconvenes Jan. 14. Speaking only for himself, he said he believed the report should tell congress that:

1. There have been some cases of war-time beatings and mistreatment of patients in veterans hospitals.

2. Hospitals are not overcrowded, but are understaffed.

3. The hospital construction program has lagged.

4. Veterans hospitals are operated more efficiently than similar state institutions.

WALKOUT OF ELECTRICAL WORKERS THREATENED

Dispute Goes To Capital

Their jobs across the country. A United Press survey disclosed.

UAW Vice President Walter P. Reuther told newsmen that the critical wage question was not touched upon in yesterday's talks between the union and officials of GM. He said the meeting was limited to a discussion of secondary issues.

Although progress was stalled in the UAW-GM dispute, some developments were recorded elsewhere in the automobile industry.

The Kaiser-Frazer Corp. resumed contract talks with the UAW, following a company announcement that it would offer a "new" company security plan to the unions. The industry newcomer hopes to start production Feb. 1 on medium-priced Frazer and low-priced Kaiser autos.

The nationalists were represented at the parley by foreign minister Wang Shih-chieh, Szech Wan, governor of Changchun province, and Shao Li-Tao, secretary general of the people's political council.

Political observers were hopeful the conferees would approve the proposal in principle and leave details for consideration by the consultative council early in January.

Meanwhile, military headquarters said Gen. Tu Le-Ming's Nationalist troops, advancing rapidly across a snow-covered southern Manchuria, had occupied the railroad station at Tang-Chiaw, 65 miles west of Mukden.

Ford Motor Company officials announced last night that 80,000 Detroit area workers would be laid off temporarily until Jan. 2 because of material shortages and inventory. A similar shutdown over the Christmas holiday ended only yesterday.

In other Ford labor relations, negotiations were resumed between the UAW and officials at the Ford of Canada plant in Windsor, Ont.

Some 10,000 employees of the Canadian firm were completing a slow back-to-work movement after a three-months walkout, under terms of a dominion-sponsored arbitration plan for settlement of their disputes.

James J. Matles, organization director of the CIO electrical workers, told reporters after a conference with federal conciliators yesterday that union's executive board would meet in New York Jan. 5 to authorize a nationwide strike.

Matles said local unions had been advised to be prepared to put a strike call into effect on short notice.

Negotiations still are in progress between the UE and officials of General Motors' electrical division, but Westinghouse and General Electric have offered no counter-proposals to the union's wage demands.

W. C. Marshall, Westinghouse vice-president, agreed to meet informally with government labor officials to explain the company's stand on the wage question. GE spokesmen, however, informed Warren they could not attend a meeting.

In other labor developments, union leaders saw the possibility of a nationwide telephone tieup if Western Electric employees in New York and New Jersey carry out a strike threat Jan. 3.

Officials of the Western Electric employees association, affiliated with the National Federation of Telephone Workers, said federation members might be asked to support a walkout. The Western Electric company, which manufactures telephone equipment, has offered to grant half the union's 30 per cent wage boost demand.

PROSPECTS FOR FARM HELP NOT TOO CHEERFUL

Dowdy Reports Experienced Men For Ohio Farms Still Hard To Find

COLUMBUS, O., December 27: Ohio farmers who now are asking about prospects for farm help in 1946 do not get a very encouraging forecast from Guy Dowdy, supervisor, emergency labor, Ohio State University, who says reports from Ohio counties show some variation in local conditions; but, in general, the supply of experienced workers applying for jobs is limited.

Most of the countries reported an increase in the number of applicants for farm work at the time factories slowed down production late in the fall but most of the applicants had a greater interest in a winter home than in farm work. Only a dribble of veterans have applied for farm work and in most cases these few have been hired.

Mr. Dowdy says that quite a number of skilled farm workers will be lost to some Ohio areas when conscientious objectors are all discharged. Most of these men were competent workmen and were familiar with farm tasks and farm machinery. Part of the conscientious objectors already have been released.

The labor supervisor does not expect Ohio farmers will be able to get help from prisoners of war in 1946. One of the last farm jobs in Ohio done by the prisoners of war was salvaging the remainder of the sugar beet crop in one area after Mexican workmen had become discouraged by cold weather and had returned to Mexico.

Almost all Jamaican farm workers have left Ohio. Many farmers who hired Jamaicans with a great deal of misgiving found that most of the men were good workers. A group of 41 in one Ohio county earned a total of $15,084 during this summer's employment.

Experience in obtaining people to husk corn in another Ohio county illustrates the reasons why farm help is often difficult to find. An advertisement in a city paper brought 67 applicants for corn husking, but a period of bad weather made it almost impossible to work and a number of those people did not husk an ear of corn in the month before snow stopped field work.

GOOD MARKETS ARE SEEN FOR STATE PEA CROP

The nation's increasing appetite for canned peas indicates stable markets for Ohio pea crop, 12,168,000 pounds of which went into cans in 1944 according to W. C. Stolk, vice president of the American Can Company.

Mr. Stolk said that a study made by his company revealed that per capita consumption of canned peas in the United States increased from 4.9 pounds, canned weight, in the crop year 1939-40 to 5.8 pounds in 1940-41, last normal pre-war crop year, a gain of almost a pound.

The only other canned vegetable item showing a consumption increase comparative to peas was canned tomatoes, Mr. Stolk continued.

In 1939-40 Americans ate 5.5 pounds, canned weight, of tomaatoes per capita as against 6.5 pounds in the period 1940-41.

That canned vegetables are steadily gaining in popularity is shown by a comparison of the consumption of all varieties, which increased from 23.39 pounds, canned weight, per capita in 1939-40 to 23.43 pounds in 1940-41.

The can official added that the widespread use of canned vegetables by the armed forces probably will be reflected in peacetime consumption, as a result of more general acquaintance with canned foods by millions of ex-servicemen.

SHEEP HELP GET RID OF PESKY MORNING GLORY

COLUMBUS, O., December 27—A painless method of eradicating bindweed, or wild morning glory or creeping Jenny as it is sometimes called, has been worked out on Minnesota farms by federal and state workers. These men say let sheep destroy the bindweed by pasturing because the animals like the weed better than some grasses.

Farmers have known that sheep like bindweed but the problem has been to provide other forage in the same spot so the sheep can be kept on the weed infested area after the bindweed has been eaten down. In the experiment, rye or Sudan grass was planted in the bindweed so the sheep could eat the grass when the weed was grazed down.

The bindweed sends up new growth and the sheep then will eat this in preference to rye or Sudan grass. The weed was destroyed in two years by this method, and the sheep were provided with pasture at the same time. Other methods of killing bindweed have been costly in materials or high in labor requirements.

RURAL AREAS KEEP CITIES' POPULATION UP

COLUMBUS, O., December 27: Birth rates on Ohio farms in 1940 were high enough to increase the farm population 24 per cent in one generation, but birth rates in Ohio cities the same year would have caused a decrease of 22 per cent in city population if there were no migration to urban centers from other areas.

Dr. A. R. Mangus, rural sociologist, Ohio State University, points out that, in addition to rural youth maintaining or increasing urban population by moving to cities, these migrants transfer wealth from farm to city in the form of inheritances, rentals, or mortgage payments.

William Howard Taft was the first President of all 48 states of the Union, as New Mexico and Arizona—the 47th and 48th states—were admitted to statehood during his administration.

The Civilian Personnel Branch of Indiantown Gap announces an urgent need for 600 kitchen workers to relieve an anticipated bottleneck in the soldiers' dining facilities.

PROSPECTS FOR FARM HELP NOT TOO CHEERFUL

Dowdy Reports Experienced Men For Ohio Farms Still Hard To Find

COLUMBUS, O., December 27: Ohio farmers who now are asking about prospects for farm help in 1946 do not get a very encouraging forecast from Guy Dowdy, supervisor, emergency labor, Ohio State University, who says reports from Ohio counties show some variation in local conditions; but, in general, the supply of experienced workers applying for jobs is limited.

Most of the countries reported an increase in the number of applicants for farm work at the time factories slowed down production late in the fall but most of the applicants had a greater interest in a winter home than in farm work. Only a dribble of veterans have applied for farm work and in most cases these few have been hired.

Mr. Dowdy says that quite a number of skilled farm workers will be lost to some Ohio areas when conscientious objectors are all discharged. Most of these men were competent workmen and were familiar with farm tasks and farm machinery. Part of the conscientious objectors already have been released.

The labor supervisor does not expect Ohio farmers will be able to get help from prisoners of war in 1946. One of the last farm jobs in Ohio done by the prisoners of war was salvaging the remainder of the sugar beet crop in one area after Mexican workmen had become discouraged by cold weather and had returned to Mexico.

Almost all Jamaican farm workers have left Ohio. Many farmers who hired Jamaicans with a great deal of misgiving found that most of the men were good workers. A group of 41 in one Ohio county earned a total of $15,084 during this summer's employment.

Experience in obtaining people to husk corn in another Ohio county illustrates the reasons why farm help is often difficult to find. An advertisement in a city paper brought 67 applicants for corn husking, but a period of bad weather made it almost impossible to work and a number of those people did not husk an ear of corn in the month before snow stopped field work.

INDUSTRIALIST SHOT BY POLICEMAN

ONE OF SAN FRANCISCO'S most prominent industrialists and clubmen, Wakefield Baker, 52, is shown on his hospital bed in San Francisco, Calif., after he had been shot in the head by policeman William Williams. The policeman charged that Baker attempted to run him down with his automobile. The wounded man was charged with drunken driving and suspicion of assault. Baker's wife is at the left. At the extreme right is officer Williams. The third man is Inspector Frank Donegan of the San Francisco Police Department. (International Soundphoto)

GOOD MARKETS ARE SEEN FOR STATE PEA CROP

The nation's increasing appetite for canned peas indicates stable markets for Ohio pea crop, 12,168,000 pounds of which went into cans in 1944 according to W. C. Stolk, vice president of the American Can Company.

Mr. Stolk said that a study made by his company revealed that per capita consumption of canned peas in the United States increased from 4.9 pounds, canned weight, in the crop year 1939-40 to 5.8 pounds in 1940-41, last normal pre-war crop year, a gain of almost a pound.

The only other canned vegetable item showing a consumption increase comparative to peas was canned tomatoes, Mr. Stolk continued.

In 1939-40 Americans ate 5.5 pounds, canned weight, of tomatoes per capita as against 6.5 pounds in the period 1940-41.

That canned vegetables are steadily gaining in popularity is shown by a comparison of the consumption of all varieties, which increased from 23.39 pounds, canned weight, per capita in 1939-40 to 23.43 pounds in 1940-41.

The can official added that the widespread use of canned vegetables by the armed forces probably will be reflected in peacetime consumption, as a result of more general acquaintance with canned foods by millions of ex-servicemen.

SHEEP HELP GET RID OF PESKY MORNING GLORY

COLUMBUS, O., December 27:—A painless method of eradicating bindweed, or wild morning glory or creeping Jenny as it is sometimes called, has been worked out on Minnesota farms by federal and state workers. These men say let sheep destroy the bindweed by pasturing because the animals like the weed better than some grasses.

Farmers have known that sheep like bindweed but the problem has been to provide other forage in the same spot so the sheep can be kept on the weed infested area after the bindweed has been eaten down. In the experiment, rye or Sudan grass was planted in the bindweed so the sheep could eat the grass when the weed was grazed down.

The bindweed sends up new growth and the sheep then will eat this in preference to rye or Sudan grass. The weed was destroyed in two years by this method, and the sheep were provided with pasture at the same time. Other methods of killing bindweed have been costly in materials or high in labor requirements.

RURAL AREAS KEEP CITIES' POPULATION UP

COLUMBUS, O., December 27: Birth rates on Ohio farms in 1940 were high enough to increase the farm population 24 per cent in one generation, but birth rates in Ohio cities the same year would have caused a decrease of 22 per cent in city population if there were no migration to urban centers from other areas.

Dr. A. R. Mangus, rural sociologist, Ohio State University, points out that, in addition to rural youth maintaining or increasing urban population by moving to cities, these migrants transfer wealth from farm to city in the form of inheritances, rentals, or mortgage payments.

HELP NEEDED TO FEED VETERANS AT INDIANTOWN

INDIANTOWN GAP, Pa., December 27:—Veterans passing through the Indiantown Gap Separation Center must be fed—but more people are needed to feed them. The Civilian Personnel Branch of Indiantown Gap announces an urgent need for 600 kitchen workers to relieve an anticipated bottleneck in the soldiers' dining facilities.

Separation figures at Indiantown Gap have continued to climb. Steadily increasing shipments of overseas returnees and the loss of station personnel have created a greater need for civilian employees.

'LITTLE GLASS EYE' IS GIVEN LIFE SENTENCE

First Jap Criminal To Be Tried In Japan Goes To Prison For Life

YOKOHAMA, Dec. 27.—Tatsuo (Little Glass Eye) Tsuchiya, first Japanese war criminal to be tried in Japan, was sentenced today to life imprisonment for beating to death an American prisoner of war.

An eight-man U. S. military commission convicted Tsuchiya on three charges of "cruel, inhuman and brutal atrocities and other offenses against certain prisoners" at Mitsuhashi camp where he served as a guard.

Chief Prosecutor Maj. Louis Owen of Atlanta, Ga., had demanded the death penalty. He charged in closing arguments that Tsuchiya "enjoyed seeing American prisoners suffer."

Tsuchiya was convicted specifically of beating to death Pfc. Robert Gordon Teas, beating and torturing another soldier and forcing the prisoners to line up and slap each other. He was found innocent of three charges that he beat and tortured three other American prisoners.

The sentence was announced by Commission President Col. Oliver E. Trechter of Los Angeles who said the verdict was reached on a secret written ballot.

Tsuchiya stood at attention as the verdict was read and his expression never changed as a translator repeated the phrases in Japanese.

The defense rested its case yesterday after the one-eyed defendant had testified more than two hours, admitting that he had slapped prisoners but otherwise had not mistreated them.

Defense Counsel Lt. Col. John Dickinson of St. Petersburg, Fla., charged in closing arguments that Tsuchiya had not had a fair trial "under rules of evidence in Anglo-Saxon law."

Dickinson said that affidavits accepted as evidence "would not have lasted five minutes in an American court." Most of them had been given by former American prisoners of war who now are in the United States.

"The Americans who signed these statements either should be brought here to face the defend-

FIRE DAMAGES OLDEST METHODIST CHURCH IN U S

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 27.—Old St. George's church, 176-year-old shrine of American Methodism, was damaged last night by a fire which destroyed the ancient Sunday School room and spread through the historic chapel.

The edifice, oldest Methodist church in the United States and second oldest in the world, for a time was threatened with destruction.

The famous church was dedicated in 1769—before the birth of the nation—and was the site of the first three conferences of American Methodism in 1773, 1774 and 1775.

ant and to be cross-examined or the defendant should be taken to the United States to be tried," Dickinson said.

Dickinson warned the commission to remember it was setting a precedent. He added that "if America lost the next war, Americans would be tried by rules, fair or unfair, established by this trial."

After the verdict, Jiko Watanabe, Japanese civilian defense staff member and president of the Yokohama bar association, said:

"As a Japanese, I feel very sorry for Tsuchiya and his family. But I believe the trial was conducted fairly and justly."

Church Of The Brethren To Help Supply Needs Of Europeans

The Rev. Lester E. Fike, pastor of the Circleville Church of the Brethren and his family accompanied by Arthur Cupp, attended a meeting in Dayton recently where Dr. M. R. Zigler gave a report of his trip to Europe.

Dr. Zigler said that one great need for the immediate Winter days is blankets and clothing. He reported a story which he said he believed to be authentic. He was told in Europe that in Yugoslavia where horses and cattle were destroyed by the armies people were trying to plow with men, women and children pulling the plow in order to sow grain; and that in some places they were so destitute of clothing they would pull the plow at night, working nude.

The local Church of the Brethren collected food, clothing and blankets for relief in a White Gift service last Sunday evening. Gifts given through the churches will be distributed through the religious organizations of Europe and supervised by representatives of the churches in America, thus guaranteeing that supplies given will be properly distributed in the name of Christ. The Rev. Mr. Fike says that the Church of the Brethren is willing to serve as a collecting and shipping agency in this community for those who may wish to contribute to this worthy cause even though they are not members of this particular church.

"Which one of three or four children to save is the heart-rending decision many European mothers face today," declared M. R. Zigler, Brethren Service Committee executive secretary, just returned from a trip to France, Belgium, Holland and Germany.

Dr. Zigler unveiled a picture of exposure, starvation, and disease which can hardly be imagined by us here. He pointed out that in one city, out of 108 babies born in July, 98 died within a month.

Though he ate better than many unfortunates, Dr. Zigler lost 14 pounds in his few short weeks abroad.

"The 12 millions likely to perish abroad from cold and hunger this Winter lend urgency to our appeal to congress for the granting of deficiency appropriations and additional funds for UNRRA activities," Dr. Zigler said, adding, "The need is so tremendous that no one agency can possibly meet it alone."

"Persons of all faiths owe it to themselves to provide token help by sending material aid abroad," Dr. Zigler stated in outlining church plans for overseas shipment. "It is time for American churches to think in terms of carload lots of goods for relief."

Cases of canned soybeans, corn, dehydrated soups, dry peas, and soap can be sent prepaid to the United Church Relief Centers at

New Windsor, Maryland, or Modesto, California. Names of sending persons or groups should be clearly indicated. Dr. Zigler disclosed that goods will be shipped overseas and distributed according to need by material aid committees organized in the various countries cooperatively by the Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant faiths and the International Red Cross.

SALVATION THROUGH WORK
An item in an Ohio paper the other day emphasized the old truth that useful work is man's true salvation, the only sure road to happiness. The story was about a childless widow no longer young, who spends a great deal of every week sewing for the wounded at one of the veterans' hospitals. She mends their socks and underwear, stitches on battle stars, buttons, decorations. She makes over uniforms for bodies that have shrunk, trousers that need only one leg. Since photographs of Gen. Eisenhower showed him in neatly belted tunics a great urge for "Ike" models have swept the hospital. She takes the coats home, for it is a difficult bit of tailoring, lops them off and bands them in the new mode. She works hard at her volunteer tasks. In these days of seamstress scarcity she has had many offers of profitable employment, for she is a skilled needlewoman. But all such opportunities she has turned down. Whenever she appears in a ward the "youngsters", as she calls them all, shout a welcome to her. This is her pay, all she asks.
This lonely woman has developed deep satisfaction from practical service. The world is a sad place for many lonely people who find life meaningless and empty. Here's a concrete idea for them, the story of a woman who "gave of the fruit of her hands" and found "the gain thereof better than fine gold."

WHAT NEXT?
SOON it will be possible to pick up a wireless telephone from purse, traveling bag or auto compartment and talk to any number desired. An electric eye will scan a grocery list and the purchases can then be collected at a central store for the customer's convenience in picking them up. An electrically heated blanket will automatically change its heat to suit varying temperatures. Illumination for night work will adjust its own control to fit the work being undertaken. An electric "thinking machine" will marshal facts about a given subject.
These are not fantasies of an Arabian Nights tale-spinner. All this is part of the new science of electronics, which is the harnessing of electricity to serve mankind, in a fashion and to a degree that sounds like magic. Electronics is so close to this kind of reality that many of the above devices are being promised in current advertising as commercial events of a very near tomorrow.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:
Up to the day after Christmas and feeling as most folk do then after eating too much and sleeping too little. Wind out of the South and, instead of warmth, bearing the makings of a blizzard. Checked again on Santa's deliveries and found them much to my liking, particularly a leather jacket from the plant workers. And the electric razor and ties and belt and shirt, etc., etc. Entirely too good to me, Santa.
Practically a truck load of junk at the post, making two trips to stack it in the car. Waved to Dr. Courtwright and Tom Brunner and then took off for the printer. Streets beginning to be slick again. Wonder whether this Winter is going to be like last? I disliked that.

mighty tired of seeing only oldsters.
If you have not renewed your automobile insurance lately you are due for a jolt. About 30 percent. That is, if you drove on an A card as did the scrivener. Rates rocketed with the end of rationing. And from the daily records the hoist was justified. Entirely too much speed these days for the condition of our cars.
Dave Dunlap dropped in. Wearing a great grin and chock full of pleasure over the idea of spending the next two months at Miami. Dave finally took the doctor's word for it and quit working so hard and now is in better condition than for years. Noted Bill Kochheiser back in his store after a siege with the flu.
Wonder what the merchants will use for merchandise now. Shelves and show cases practically bare of many lines, and the dealers say that their suppliers are pessimistic about the first half of the year. If their forecasts are correct merchandise will be harder to obtain in the next six months than at any time during the war.
How much of that British bond issue do you want if it is sold to the public as suggested by Senator Johnson, the Colorado Democrat? Under Johnson's plan, the bondholders rather than the U. S. treasury would bear the loss if the British should default. The bonds would be offered to the public and the interest rate would be exactly what Britain pays and the buyers would take whatever risk there is and accept whatever payment Britain might make.

This high finance is far over my head. But I am not alone. Right over the heads of our bankers as well. I figured out the Lend-Lease settlement with Britain, worked it out on a percentage basis, figured it all on $10,000 and threw ice and slush in all directions tearing to the Third bank. Told Clark Will I wished to borrow $10,000 and that after five or six years with no interest payments I would return and negotiate a settlement for $220. Also that I would not have the $200 and that it would be necessary for me to borrow an additional $1,500 to make the $220 settlement of my $10,000 loan. And what did Clark say? "You're nuts." Just shows you how narrow minded our local financiers are. He couldn't see it at all even after it had been worked out by our master minds in Washington. And to think that there are some who would turn our business and banks over to the government for operation. If the banks ever turned over I'm taking out my $1.87 and burying it.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY
By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—You might as well get rid of those few dollars remaining after the Christmas splurge and there's no easier way to do it than by celebrating the arrival of the new year in the local clubs and hotels.
The price will be about the same as it has been the past couple of years—both in dollars and hangovers—unless you want to stay up and greet the dawn. Now that the war is over, this is again possible because places selling liquor will be permitted to forget about the usual 4 a. m. closing by payment of a small extra license fee. That extra whoopee naturally will hike the tab.
For those places announcing a fixed price for the privilege of sitting down for the evening, $20 per person seems to be the top. This will be charged by the new Embassy club, which makes it bow to tonight. Most of the other big night clubs, including such spots as the Zanzibar, Versailles, Latin Quarter, Le Martinique and the Carnival, will have a top of $15. Several of these also have cheaper rates, down to about $7, depending on the table locations. The set room of the Waldorf Astoria will charge $15 but this hotel has several other rooms in which the price scales down to $5.
The Diamond Horseshoe and a majority of the big hotel rooms will let you in for a top of $12.50. They also have a mixed price policy.
In some cases the over-all rate, which permits you to sit down, eat, enjoy the show (if any), and dance, includes the tax. Only rarely will it include liquor, one exception being Le Ruban Bleu, which will provide a bottle of champagne with its $15-per-couple tariff.
Most of the places have made formal wear optional, but the Plaza hotel has returned to the prewar "formal dress is requested" for its Persian and Terrace rooms. Ditto the New Yorker hotel's Terrace room. The Astor hotel will throw open its grand ballroom for the night at $8 a head.
If you're one of those people who likes to start off the evening by going to the theater, you'll pay more than ordinarily. Most stage attractions will follow the custom of boosting their scales from $1 to $3, with the top price of $9.60 a ticket being asked by several of the big musical hits.
But, as always, the biggest show will be outdoors in Times Square where many thousands of people spend the evening milling back and forth and dropping into an occasional bar. Their expensive evening will consist of much horn-blowing and waiting for the midnight stroke that will start 1946 on its way and the bulk of its welcomers on the way home.
The Thomas job play, "Therese," in which Eva Le Gallienne, Dame Mary Whitty and Victor Jory have been playing since Oct. 9, will call it a run of 96 performances after the New Year's eve showing. That's an odd time to quit, on the first day of the week, but the producer doesn't want to miss that extra income from the holiday.

LAFF-A-DAY

DIET AND HEALTH

Nerve Disorder in Diabetes
By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.
CERTAIN diseases, when they occur and are not kept under control, may produce permanent damage in various parts of the body. This is the case with diabetes, a condition due to lack of secretion known as insulin, from the pancreas. Insulin is needed so that the body can use sugars.
If diabetes goes untreated, a disturbance of the nervous system may develop known as diabetic neuropathy. If this damage to the nervous system is recognized early, the condition may be completely relieved by bringing the diabetes under control.
Doctor R. Wayne Rundles of the University of Michigan has studied 125 patients with diabetic neuropathy. He finds that the first evidence of such nervous system damage is an absence of certain of the nervous reflexes, particularly the knee jerk.
It can be found whether this reflex is present by tapping the patient on the knee, and seeing if the leg kicks forward. In addition to these disturbances of the reflexes there may also be severe constipation, chronic diarrhea, no appetite, nausea.
In about one-fourth of the patients, there was trouble with the sphincter muscles controlling the bowel and bladder, and impotency developed in over one-fourth of the men. Patients with diabetic neuropathy also often develop swelling of the legs and have night sweats. They may be unable to stand hot or cold temperatures very well. They may have low blood pressure with fainting attacks when they assume an erect position, especially in the morning after arising, or after exertion.
In treating diabetic neuropathy, the most important thing is to bring the diabetes under control. This requires the use of the proper diet, and the giving of insulin. In addition, the use of salicylates for relieving pain, cool baths, and ice packs, will often help.
If control of the diabetes is maintained for a reasonable period of time, mild cases of the neuropathy will recover in a few weeks, the moderately severe ones in six to twelve months, and the severe cases in one to two years.

STARS SAY—

For Thursday, December 27
A SUDDEN and surprising event or set of circumstances may prove to be a grand crisis in which dramatic and breathtaking factors may entirely and radically affect the life, its fortunes and destiny.
The love element seems particularly involved, possibly in sudden engagements, weddings or possibly elopements. There may be stubborn obstacles, delays and perhaps the determined opposition of elders or superiors. Great issues depend upon wisdom of plans.
Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a sudden and dramatic event, which will have a bearing on the future and its happy destiny. A devastating and uprooting situation may have startling results, with radical change, travel, romance and adventure. There is likely to be stern opposition from elders.
A child born on this day although dramatic, romantic, adventurous, has the faculty to exercise sound, reasonable and practical judgment in sudden crises.

THE BIRTHDAY MURDER
by LANGE LEWIS

CHAPTER THIRTEEN
RICHARD TUCK, of the Los Angeles Homicide squad, was regarded by his colleagues as being a rather queer duck. Concerning his own understanding of crime, he possessed a humility against which their glib cynicism rang hollow and empty. He seemed careless of achieving a record for speedily winding up cases in which he was involved, and showed instead a disinclination to make an arrest without substantial evidence. The result of this odd quirk was that no case of his which had come to trial had ever been lost by the state.
This gave him a definite standing with Gufferty, the head of the homicide squad and, which was more important, with the district attorney's office. A number of detectives were jealous of him. And yet, his convincing unconcern robbed their jealousy of much point, and left many of them with a sense of most annoying frustration regarding all six feet five inches of Richard Tuck.
They could never understand why when violent death left its unusual haunts on the wrong side of the tracks and entered a home in Beverly Hills, a Los Angeles university or other such genteel places, it was Tuck whom Gufferty placed in charge, rather than one of themselves. It certainly wasn't that he was a smooth man; he was a slow man, and his inevitable brown suit was apt to want pressing. He took down his own notes in a strange private shorthand. He was grudging in giving information to reporters, yet somehow managed to retain their liking. They called him "The Moose." His final report of a case was long, involved, painstaking, watertight, and written in a flawless, if rather pedestrian, English prose.
Of his private life it was known that he lived alone in a house on a hill in the northeastern part of town, that he sometimes went to concerts, that he had no visible family and few friends. Apparently his work and his mild pleasures were all he wanted. It was also known that he had once been married to a woman named Lucy, and that it was his sudden decision to join the police force as a common, blue-uniformed, foot-slogging policeman which had directly caused the divorce in which the brief marriage had terminated.
E. Byron Froody usually worked with Tuck. Froody was a little fat man with sad green eyes, a waddling walk which had gained him the epithet "Duck Butt" (of which he always pretended to be unaware), and an admiration of Tuck which would have been embarrassing to many men. Froody loved all niggling detail; he was the perfect leg man. He never swore; he knew his Sherlock Holmes by heart, and his Tarzan almost as well. He clipped poetry from the editorial page of the city's most conservative newspaper and kept it for weeks in his wallet. His private life was as colorless as Tuck's own.

So these two went their ways apart from the others and did not seem to mind. They gradually gained a certain distinction. The other members of the squad at last adopted toward them the contemptuously affectionate attitude which a conservative family adopts toward a couple of half-crazy relatives who have distinguished themselves in some outlandish profession like ballet dancing or the composing of classical music.
A large, pretty woman opened the door of the little Mexican house to Tuck and Froody. In spite of the dark circles below her brown eyes she had about her that flush of subdued excitement which grips certain women at a time of sudden tragedy in which they themselves are not personally involved. She had on a suit of soft blue wool, and the color seemed to Tuck too young for her ripe body, her large face. She said in a whisper, "Shh. She's asleep."
She stood aside to let them enter and Tuck could see the form of a woman, covered by a blanket, lying on the sofa in the living room. He could see only a tuft of gray hair, a sharp, closed face. She was lying on her back. "Is that Mrs. Hime?" he asked.
The large pretty woman nodded. "I'm Bernice Saxe," she said in a small voice. "Dr. Mahler called me after he phoned you. I'm Victoria's oldest friend, you see."
Tuck heard a subdued sound in the kitchen to the left of the front door. "That's Hazel, Mrs. Hime's maid," said Bernice Saxe. "She's been with her for three years, and can tell you anything you want to know."
"First I want to see Mr. Hime," said Tuck.
Bernice Saxe pointed down the narrow dark hall leading off to the right, opposite the kitchen door. "He's in there, I think."

East at this table was straining for a top score in the match-point duplicate. That's why he made his thin double of North's spade bid, also why he kept his diamond suit hidden. He wanted some kind of unusual score, pretty sure to be different from the counts made by other pairs.
South led his spade 8, which North read as probably the top of his partner's holding. Fearing that East had five spades, North decided to switch and try to knock the diamond A out of the dummy to create the illusion that he probably could stop hearts by winning the finesse and thus hoping to induce East to play the top two cards of the suit instead.

East then promptly ran six diamond tricks, on the last two discarding hearts in order to keep a couple of clubs for protection if the heart finesse lost. Then he finessed hearts and ran the suit. But he had only four cards left in it, so scored only ten tricks, giving him bottom score, as all heart declarers took either 11 or 12 tricks to do better.

SALVATION THROUGH WORK

AN item in an Ohio paper the other day emphasized the old truth that useful work is man's true salvation, the only sure road to happiness. The story was about a childless widow no longer young, who spends a great deal of every week sewing for the wounded at one of the veterans' hospitals. She mends their socks and underwear, stitches on battle stars, buttons, decorations. She makes over uniforms for bodies that have shrunk, trousers that need only one leg. Since photographs of Gen. Eisenhower showed him in neatly belted tunics a great urge for "Ike" models have swept the hospital. She takes the coats home, for it is a difficult bit of tailoring, lops them off and bands them in the new mode. She works hard at her volunteer tasks. In these days of seamstress scarcity she has had many offers of profitable employment, for she is a skilled needlewoman. But all such opportunities she has turned down. Whenever she appears in a ward the "youngsters", as she calls them all, shout a welcome to her. This is her pay, all she asks.

This lonely woman has developed deep satisfaction from practical service. The world is a sad place for many lonely people who find life meaningless and empty. Here's a concrete idea for them, the story of a woman who "gave of the fruit of her hands" and found "the gain thereof better than fine gold."

WHAT NEXT?

SOON it will be possible to pick up a wireless telephone from purse, traveling bag or auto compartment and talk to any number desired. An electric eye will scan a grocery list and the purchases can then be collected at a central store for the customer's convenience in picking them up. An electrically heated blanket will automatically change its heat to suit varying temperatures. Illumination for night work will adjust its own control to fit the work being undertaken. An electric "thinking machine" will marshal facts about a given subject.

These are not fantasies of an Arabian Nights tale-spinner. All this is part of the new science of electronics, which is the harnessing of electricity to serve mankind, in a fashion and to a degree that sounds like magic. Electronics is so close to this kind of reality that many of the above devices are being promised in current advertising as commercial events of a very near tomorrow.

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to the day after Christmas and feeling as most folk do then after eating too much and sleeping too little. Wind out of the South and, instead of warmth, bearing the makings of a blizzard. Checked again on Santa's deliveries and found them much to my liking, particularly a leather jacket from the plant workers. And the electric razor and ties and belt and shirt, etc., etc. Entirely too good to me, Santa.

Practically a truck load of junk at the post, making two trips to stack it in the car. Waved to Dr. Courtwright and Tom Brunner and then took off for the printer's. Streets beginning to be slick again. Wonder whether this Winter is going to be like last? I disliked that.

Chatted with John Boggs and learned that his son, John, is stationed with the infantry right in the heart of Tokyo. Only six doors from the imperial palace. May be assigned to the MacArthur guard and that is quite a distinction. Also learned that Bob Pickardt is out of the Navy Air Corps after three and one-half years. Ended as a petty officer. More and more of the boys appear on the streets. And that is good, for I was getting mighty tired of seeing only oldsters.

If you have not renewed your automobile insurance lately you are due for a jolt. About 30 percent. That is, if you drove on an A card as did the scrivener. Rates rocketed with the end of rationing. And from the daily records the hoist was justified. Entirely too much speed these days for the condition of our cars.

Dave Dunlap dropped in. Wearing a great grin and chock full of pleasure over the idea of spending the next two months at Miami. Dave finally took the doctor's word for it and quit working so hard and now is in better condition than for years. Noted Bill Kochheiser back in his store after a siege with the flu.

Wonder what the merchants will use for merchandise now. Shelves and show cases practically bare of many lines, and the dealers say that their suppliers are pessimistic about the first half of the year. If their forecasts are correct merchandise will be harder to obtain in the next six months than at any time during the war.

How much of that British bond issue do you want if it is sold to the public as suggested by Senator Johnson, the Colorado Democrat? Under Johnson's plan, the bondholders rather than the U. S. treasury would bear the loss if the British should default. The bonds would be offered to the public and the interest rate would be exactly what Britain pays and the buyers would take whatever risk there is and accept whatever payment Britain might make.

This high finance is far over my head. But I am not alone. Right over the heads of our bankers as well. I figured out the Lend-Lease settlement with Britain, worked it out on a percentage basis, figured it all on $10,000 and threw ice and slush in all directions tearing to the Third bank. Told Clark Will I wished to borrow $10,000 and that after five or six years with no interest payments I would return and negotiate a settlement for $220. Also that I would not have the $200 and that it would be necessary for me to borrow an additional $1,500 to make the $220 settlement of my $10,000 loan. And what did Clark say? "You're nuts." Just shows you how narrow minded our local financiers are. He couldn't see it at all even after it had been worked out by our master minds in Washington. And to think that there are some who would turn our business and banks over to the government for operation. If the banks ever turned over I'm taking out my $1.87 and burying it.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVEN

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—You might as well get rid of those few dollars remaining after the Christmas splurge and there's no easier way to do it than by celebrating the arrival of the new year in the local clubs and hotels.

The price will be about the same as it has been the past couple of years—both in dollars and hangers—unless you want to stay up and greet the dawn. Now that the war is over, this is again possible because places selling liquor will be permitted to forget about the usual 4 a. m. closing by payment of a small extra license fee. That extra whoopee naturally will hike the tab.

For those places announcing a fixed price for the privilege of sitting down for the evening, $20 per person seems to be the top. This will be charged by the new Embassy club, which makes it bow tonight. Most of the other big night clubs, including such spots as the Zanzibar, Versailles, Latin Quarter, Le Martinique and the Carnival, will have a top of $15. Several of these also have cheaper rates, down to about $7, depending on the table locations. The sord room of the Waldorf Astoria will charge $15 but this hotel has several other rooms in which the price scales down to $5.

The Diamond Horseshoe and a majority of the big hotel rooms will let you in for a top of $12.50. They also have a mixed price policy.

In some cases the over-all rate, which permits you to sit down, eat, enjoy the show (if any), and dance, includes the tax. Only rarely will it include liquor, one exception being Le Ruban Bleu, which will provide a bottle of champagne with its $15-per-couple tariff.

Most of the places have made formal wear optional, but the Plaza hotel has returned to the prewar "formal dress is requested" for its Persian and Terrace rooms. Ditto the New Yorker hotel's Terrace room. The Astor hotel will throw open its grand ballroom for the night at $8 a head.

If you're one of those people who likes to start off the evening by going to the theater, you'll pay more than ordinarily. Most stage attractions will follow the custom of boosting their scales from $1 to $3, with the top price of $9.60 a ticket being asked by several of the big musical hits.

But, as always, the biggest show will be outdoors in Times Square where many thousands of people spend the evening milling back and forth and dropping into an occasional bar. Their expensive evening will consist of much horn-blowing and waiting for the midnight stroke that will start 1946 on its way and the bulk of its welcome on the way home.

The Thomas job play, "Therese," in which Eva Le Gallienne, Dame Mary Whitty and Victor Jory have been playing since Oct. 9, will call it a run of 96 performances after the New Year's eve showing. That's an odd time to quit, on the first day of the week, but the producer doesn't want to miss that extra income from the holiday.

Nerve Disorder in Diabetes

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

CERTAIN diseases, when they occur and are not kept under control, may produce permanent damage in various parts of the body. This is the case with diabetes, a condition due to lack of secretion known as insulin, from the pancreas. Insulin is needed so that the body can use sugars.

If diabetes goes untreated, a disturbance of the nervous system may develop known as diabetic neuropathy. If this damage to the nervous system is recognized early, the condition may be completely relieved by bringing the diabetes under control.

Doctor R. W. Bundesen of the University of Michigan has studied 125 patients with diabetic neuropathy. He finds that the first evidence of such nervous system damage is an absence of certain of the nervous reflexes, particularly the knee jerk.

It can be found whether this reflex is present by tapping the patient on the knee, and seeing if the leg kicks forward. In addition to these disturbances of the reflexes there may also be severe constipation, chronic diarrhea, no appetite, nausea.

In about one-fourth of the patients, there was trouble with the sphincter muscles controlling the bowel and bladder, and impotency developed in over one-fourth of the men. Patients with diabetic neuropathy also often develop swelling of the legs and have night sweats. They may be unable to stand hot or cold temperatures very well. They may have low blood pressure with fainting attacks when they assume an erect position, especially in the morning after arising, or after exertion.

In treating diabetic neuropathy, the most important thing is to bring the diabetes under control. This requires the use of the proper diet, and the giving of insulin. In addition, the use of salicylates for relieving pain, cool baths, and ice packs, will often help.

If control of the diabetes is maintained for a reasonable period of time, mild cases of the neuropathy will recover in a few weeks, the moderately severe ones in six to twelve months, and the severe cases in one to two years.

STARS SAY—

For Thursday, December 27

A SUDDEN and surprising event or set of circumstances may prove to be a grand crisis in which dramatic and breathtaking factors may entirely and radically affect the life, its fortunes and destiny.

The love element seems particularly involved, possibly in sudden engagements, weddings or possibly elopements. There may be stubborn obstacles, delays and perhaps the determined opposition of elders or superiors. Great issues depend upon wisdom of plans.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a sudden and dramatic event, which will have major bearing on the future and its happy destiny. A devastating and uprooting situation may have startling results, with radical change, travel, romance and adventure. There is likely to be stern opposition from elders.

A child born on this day although dramatic, romantic, adventurous, has the faculty to exercise sound, reasonable and practical judgment in sudden crises.

THE BIRTHDAY MURDER

by LANGE LEWIS

COPYRIGHT, 1945, BY THE BOBB-MERILL COMPANY, DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

RICHARD TUCK, of the Los Angeles homicide squad, was regarded by his colleagues as being a rather queer duck. Concerning his own understanding of crime, he possessed a humility against which their glib cynicism rang hollow and empty. He seemed careless of achieving a record for speedily winding up cases in which he was involved, and showed instead a disinclination to make an arrest without substantial evidence. The result of this odd quirk was that no case of his which had come to trial had ever been lost by the state.

This gave him a definite standing with Guffery, the head of the homicide squad and, which was more important, with the district attorney's office. A number of detectives were jealous of him. And yet his convincing unconcern robbed their jealousy of much point, and left many of them with a sense of most annoying frustration regarding all six feet five inches of Richard Tuck.

They could never understand why when violent death left its unusual haunts on the wrong side of the tracks and entered a home in Beverly Hills, a Los Angeles university or other such genteel places, it was Tuck whom Guffery placed in charge, rather than one of themselves. It certainly wasn't that he was a smooth man; he was a slow man, and his inevitable brown suit was apt to wear pressing. He took down his own notes in a strange private shorthand. He was grudging in giving information to reporters, yet somehow managed to retain their liking. They called him "The Moose." His final report of a case was long, involved, painstaking, watertight, and written in a flawless, if rather pedestrian, English prose.

Of his private life it was known that he lived alone in a house on a hill in the northeastern part of town, that he sometimes went to concert, that he had no visible family and few friends. Apparently his work and his mild pleasures were all he wanted. It was also known that he had once been married to a woman named Lucy, and that it was his sudden decision to join the police force as a common, blue-uniformed, foot-slogging policeman which had directly caused the divorce in which the brief marriage had terminated.

E. Byron Froody usually worked with Tuck. Froody was a little fat man with sad green eyes, a waddling walk which had gained him the epithet "Duck Butt" (of which he always pretended to be unaware), and an admiration of Tuck which would have been embarrassing to many men. Froody loved all niggling detail; he was the perfect leg man. He never swore; he knew his Sherlock Holmes by heart, and his Tarzan almost as well. He clipped poetry from the editorial page of the city's most conservative newspaper and kept it for weeks in his wallet. His private life was as colorless as Tuck's own.

So these two went their ways apart from the others and did not seem to mind. They gradually gained a certain distinction. The other members of the squad at last adopted toward them the contemptuously affectionate attitude which a conservative family adopts toward a couple of half-crazy relatives who have distinguished themselves in some outlandish profession like ballet dancing or the composing of classical music.

A large, pretty woman opened the door of the little Mexican house to Tuck and Froody. In spite of the dark circles below her brown eyes she had about her that flush of subdued excitement which grips certain women at a time of sudden tragedy in which they themselves are not personally involved. She had on a suit of soft blue wool, and the color seemed to Tuck too young for her ripe body, her large face. She said in a whisper, "Shh. She's asleep."

She stood aside to let them enter and Tuck could see the form of a woman, covered by a blanket, lying on the sofa in the living room. He could see only a fluff of gray hair, a sharp, closed face. She was lying on her back. "Is that Mrs. Hime?" he asked.

The large pretty woman nodded. "I'm Bernice Saxe," she said in a small voice. "Dr. Mahler called me after he phoned you. I'm Victoria's oldest friend, you see."

Tuck heard a subdued sound in the kitchen to the left of the front door. "That's Hazel, Mrs. Hime's maid," said Bernice Saxe. "She's been with her for three years, and can tell you anything you want to know."

"First I want to see Mr. Hime," said Tuck.

Bernice Saxe pointed down the narrow dark hall leading off to the right, opposite the kitchen door. "He's in there, I think."

"You haven't seen the body?" Bernice Saxe's shoulders drew up in something like a shudder. "I've been in the kitchen talking to Hazel."

Tuck noted at once the curious posture of the dead man, Albert Hime. The two big policemen who had been talking quietly when he entered the bedroom snapped to something like attention, gave him their meager information. The dead man was a film producer. He had died from some sort of poison. His wife had not discovered it until the morning because they had separate rooms. "There's an inkstain on his right forefinger," added the smaller policeman, and Tuck duly noted that there was. He excused them. They had no sooner gone than the medical examiner arrived, accompanied by a photographer, a fingerprint expert and two young reporters. Tuck stopped the reporters at the door and gave them the basic facts. As they had barely time to make the next edition they left docilely. When he re-entered Albert Hime's bedroom the medical examiner was completing his cursory first survey. "Can't tell much until after the P. M., except that the doctor who reported the case was right. This man has been poisoned. He's been dead for approximately 10 hours. Say since between one and three in the morning. It wasn't one of the caustic poisons; I don't think it was a narcotic, either, but I'm not sure yet."

"From the position of the body," Tuck said, "it looks as though the last painful symptoms had set in fast. It looks as though he started to feel bad, maybe woke up with a belly pain, lay wondering whether he had indigestion, got up and started to the door to get some soda or a doctor and keeled over onto the floor."

"It does look that way," agreed the medical examiner. "Didn't he have a wife? Where was she?"

"Separate bedrooms," said Tuck. "Humph," said the medical examiner. "Most poisons have acutely painful final symptoms, preceding coma. She must be a hard sleeper."

"She seems to be," said Tuck mildly, thinking of the woman on the sofa. He turned and looked down at Froody beside him. "Take a good look around for some poison," he said. Froody nodded and bustled out.

"Well," said the medical examiner, "I'll finish here and go."

After a scrupulous examination of the room, which offered nothing, Tuck left the photographer, the fingerprint man and the medical examiner at work and returned to the kitchen. The servant, a tiny woman with white hair, a pink sweater and a blurred expression due to her excessively thick rimless eyeglasses, was pouring sudsy water out of an enamel dishpan. Mrs. Saxe, smoking a cork-tipped cigarette, watched in a desultory way. Tuck pointed a long finger at the dishwasher. "What have you been washing?" he asked sternly.

"The dinner dishes," replied the servant. Her voice was soft and blurred, too, and behind her glasses her pallid eyes flashed onto his stern face and then were gone. "Don't you know enough not to touch any possible evidence when a man has died of poison, may have been murdered?" asked Tuck.

"Murdered?" said Bernice Saxe sharply. The long ash tumbled unheeded from the tip of her cigarette. "I'm not a detective," said the servant with meek tartness. "I always do the dishes when I come in mornings. And anyhow, they were all rinsed. Mr. and Mrs. Hime always rinse them."

Herald Carriers Enjoy 10th Annual Christmas Party

Who said boys did not like parties? They like the Herald Carrier parties, the tenth annual one of which was held Wednesday evening in the hotel dining room.

Sixteen regular carriers, regular boys too, some of whom were lucky enough to have substitutes, who could come along, were present for the turkey dinner which was followed by ice cream and cake and a magic show put on by Thurman (Houdini) Miller.

Thurman had no trouble getting volunteers to aid him in producing magical tricks as each boy present felt he could learn how it was done by getting closer. It was funny when the sheriff jr. was helping and the watch that he thought Thurman had in his hand was fastened on the sheriff's back as he turned around.

A replica of a page from the Circleville Herald in miniature on which the boys names were placed seated these boys at the table—Robert Morgan, Donald Metzler, Johnnie Howard, Richard Buskirk, David Cockrell, Eugene Kerns, Donald (Dickie) Rhoads, Gregg Buskirk, Max Skinner, Dwight Radcliff, Herbert Weaver and James Craycraft. James George and Lincoln Isaac, were unable to be present. Donald Cook, Richard Olney and Walter Heine were the substitutes. Others present were John Payne, supervisor, Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Wilson, Mrs. R. H. Bates, Miss Naomi Ferguson, Miss Irene Skaggs and Ann Shea.

SLIP MADIGAN PICKS WINNERS OF BOWL GAMES

Alabama, Oklahoma A & M, Texas, Holy Cross Are Favored

BY EDWARD F. MADIGAN
(Written For United Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 27.—

Way down in Patagonia there grows a very unusual tree. This tree, like all other trees, in the southern Autumn, sheds her leaves and bares her limbs to the winds of the Magellan straits. But unlike the other trees, it then blossoms forth with a beautiful flower, the fragrance of which fills the valleys.

So, too, in football the teams have fallen like leaves throughout the season and the schedules east and west dropped one by one until the outstanding teams have blossomed forth into bowl ball-games. And like the Patagonian flower they give the fragrance to the aftermath of the football season.

The greatest of these bowl games by tradition and past history is the Tournament of Roses and the Rose Bowl game. For more than a score of years the greatest teams in the nation hung on the expectancy of an invitation to the Rose Bowl game and some of football's greatest contests were played on New Year's day in Pasadena, California.

The success of this game has acted as an inspiration for other sections of the country to produce similar spectacles. Now we have a great number of bowl contests, but a few are outstanding. They are: Rose Bowl Pasadena; Shrine East-West game, San Francisco; Sugar Bowl, New Orleans; Cotton Bowl, Dallas, Texas; and Orange Bowl, Miami, Florida.

In Alabama the Rose Bowl game offers one of the finest teams in the country and while the selectors generally pick Alabama to beat the University of Southern California, I think we can expect a much closer ball game than appears on the surface. There is no doubt that Alabama's Harry Gilmer is one of the finest passers in the country, supported by potent running attack and on the record of the two teams should score a decisive victory. However, I feel, that U. S. C. is a much stronger team than her record indicates. U. S. C. bogged down in the middle of the season but in the meantime Coach Jeff Cravath has been able to develop organization, something that he lacked during the slump. Forced to put into the ball game men who just returned from the service, his team play suffered. There shouldn't be any of the apparent disorganization that showed on several important occasions during the past season. If any breaks in the game come to U. S. C., look for an upset.

The Trojans have a tradition in Rose Bowl contests that should be an inspiration to any team and the sons of Troy will be giving of their best to keep their record in the Sugar Bowl game, Oklahoma A. & M. has a big, powerful contest; unblemished.

A full football team with a fast backfield and an outstanding passer in Fenimore. They are pitted against St. Mary's team whose youthfulness and clever handling of the ball has drawn the acclaim of the fans of the Pacific Coast. These headless boys with their rapid must meet the bludgeon of Oklahoma's powerful line in this contest. Two of the most frequent selections for All-America half-back are pitted against each other. Fenimore of Oklahoma A. & M. and Wedemeyer of St. Mary's. Both are outstanding runners and are not only masters of the forward pass but the backward pass as well.

St. Mary's in her games on the coast has relied on the speed and dexterity of featherweight personnel. However, Oklahoma is not only big but possesses one of the fastest backfields in the country. While the Gaels will match speed with

They are pitted against a St. Mary's team whose youthfulness and clever handling of the ball has drawn the acclaim of the fans of the Pacific Coast. These beardless boys with their rapier must meet the bludgeon of Oklahoma's powerful line in this contest. Two of the most frequent selections for All-America half-back are pitted against each other. Fenimore of Oklahoma A. & M. and Wedemeyer of St. Mary's. Both are outstanding runners and are not only masters of the forward pass but the backward pass as well.

St. Mary's in her games on the coast has relied on the speed and dexterity of featherweight personnel. However, Oklahoma is not only big but possesses one of the fastest backfields in the country. While the Gaels will match speed with speed I doubt that they will be able to match strength with strength, and while the Sugar Bowl game should be a very spectacular contest the combination of speed and power gives Oklahoma A. & M. a decided advantage.

The Shrine East-West contest is predicated on an entirely different theory than the all-collegiate contests. It requires immediate organization which can only be accomplished by the ablest of quick coaching in order to produce any semblance of good team play. The outstanding players from East, Midwest, South and West provides a magnet unequalled except in the Chicago all-star game. Many of the nation's greatest gridiron talent have displayed their skill on the dirt of Kezar stadium. To go over the list of names of players who have participated in this game would be reading the who's who of football in the past twenty years.

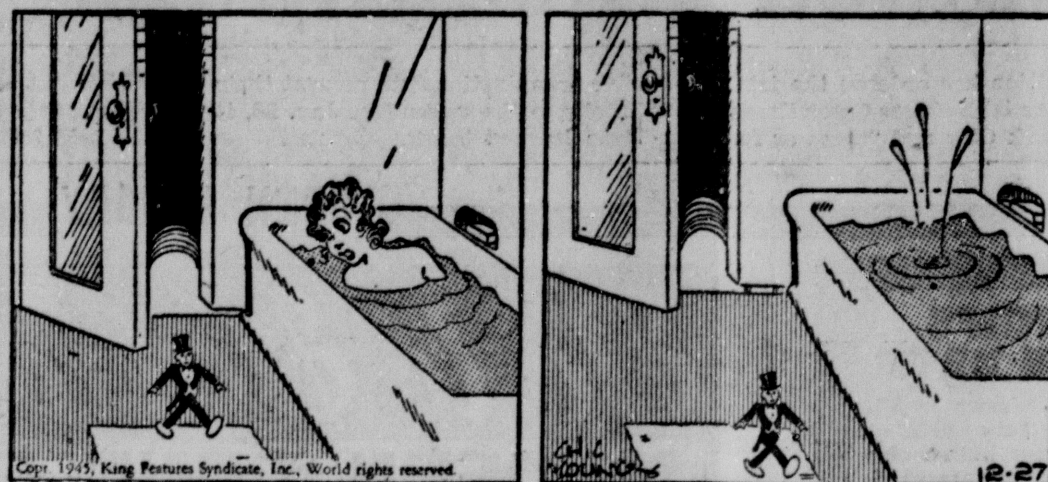

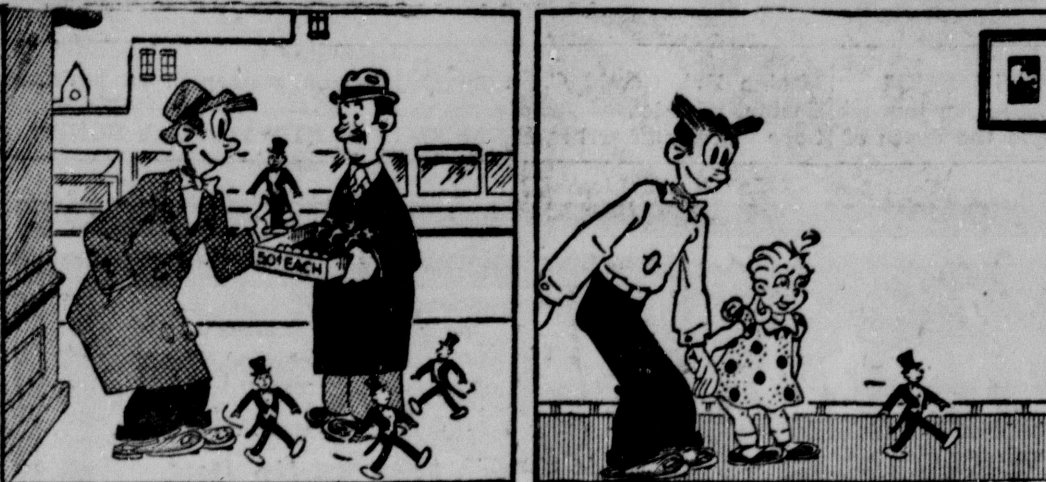

The war and the return of colleges to pre-war rules has cut down the great names this year but it will give opportunities to many players who were lost in the shuffle of All-Americans. Players like Buster McClure and Max Dodge, tackle and end of Nevada, are examples of players who might well shine brighter than their All-American counterparts in other bowl games.

Patients From Feeble-minded Institutions Placed In Homes

'FAMILY CARE' PROGRAM OPENS FOR PATIENTS

Persons From Orient, Other Institutions Sent Out Under New Plan

A "family care" program for some patients in the Orient state school for the mentally deficient has been announced by the Welfare Director Frazier Reams. Placements of mental patients under a supervised "family care" program were recently made for the first time in Ohio's mental hygiene history, Mr. Reams disclosed.

The placements were hailed by mental hygiene leaders as an important advance in the State's efforts to build a satisfactory overall mental health program to provide adequate care for its mentally ill.

The welfare director said that family care involved the placement in private homes of patients who have improved sufficiently so that further hospital care and treatment is no longer necessary.

"The placement of patients under the family care program represents a transition period between institutional life and return to their own families," Reams said.

"Family care of the mentally ill might be compared to a convalescent period of a person recovering from a prolonged physical illness," he added. "Its purpose is to provide a normal family environment for those who have recovered sufficiently to leave a state hospital, but who are not yet ready to return to a life of complete independence in the community."

Twenty-three patients from the state schools for mentally deficient at Apple Creek and Orient have already been placed under the program. Placements from these two institutions will continue and when more funds become available for the program, the family care work will be extended to other state institutions for the mentally deficient and mentally ill (insane).

The program was worked out under the direction of Dr. Frank F. Tallman, State Commissioner of Mental Hygiene, and Mrs. Magdolna Culver, Chief Psychiatric Social Worker for the division.

Only harmless ambulatory patients who can respond to therapy and constructive supervision are placed under family care.

The person in charge of the family care home is paid a small weekly sum by the state for each patient cared for. This sum varies slightly according to the condition and needs of the patient. Although the state pays for these patients in private homes, the family care program is "not a boarding home" proposition, the mental hygiene commissioner asserted.

Every precaution is taken to carefully select the homes which are to participate in the program and every effort made to guard against exploitation of patients by frequent visits to the home by trained welfare workers from the institutions which place the patients.

"These trained workers under the guidance of a hospital psychiatrist help the members of the family care home to better understand the patient and the nature of his illness," Dr. Tallman said.

By removing harmless or improved patients from institutions, when everything possible in the way of specialized hospital treatment has been provided, the family care program frees a certain number of beds for persons with acute symptoms, but for whom no room is now available in institutions.
